A Washington Post Notable Book
A Best Book of the Year: San Francisco Chronicle, NPR, Financial Times, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, BookPage
Heartbreaking... . Mordantly funny... . Takes us on a rare flight of self-transcendence... . Moments of recognition bring jolts like electric shocks.
"The New York Review of Books" "Wonderful... . Masterful... . Profound... . Not a single false note."
"USA Today" "Moore deftly paints with negative space, releasing tremendous poignancy... . A vibrant and nimble display of Moore's signature wit."
"San Francisco Chronicle" "Ms Moore's writing glides. She describes the mundane with precision and grace... . Bark simultaneously honours and regrets the messiness of human relationships. Ms Moore is like one of her characters: sternness in one eye and gentleness in the other."
"The Economist" "One of the finest short story writers in the country."
"Los Angeles Review of Books" "Moore's writing contains multitudes, mixed in exacting proportions, which is to say: this potpourri is utterly and totally unique... . There really is no one quite like her."
"The New Republic" "Lorrie Moore still dazzles... . These powerfully, almost savagely, human stories shine with a spirit of playfulness and the logic of love."

"Bark" is the first collection of stories in 16 years by Lorrie Moore, and I'll admit that when I first saw its modest size and table of contents "eight." Bark () is a short story collection by American author Lorrie Moore. It was short-listed for the Story Prize in The collection was short listed for the Frank. Hard to believe but this latest collection of stories finds Lorrie Moore still improving, writes Geoff Dyer.

The author is still capable of surprise with her offbeat, funny, painful stories of middle-class Americans with midlife worries.
