In The Backlands, an ancient war has just begun and 23 year old Ray Hatcher has found himself thrown into the middle of it. But was his role given to him by fate or someone else pulling the strings? Ray Hatcher has been framed and sentenced to a prison work camp on humanity's new home, Anatus. While mining alongside the native, lizard-like slave species called Cydarians, he uncovers an ancient machine in the rusty dirt known as a biomech that could be the key to his freedom. The problem is only Cydarians are able to "bond" with biomechs, serving as their pilot and physical host. His hopes of finding a willing Cydarian were non-existent until a Cydarian doctor named Sy saves him from near death and agrees to escape with him. Everything goes according to plan but in a freak accident the biomech bonds with Ray instead of Sy. Now with his life and destiny entangled with the biomech, Ray must solve the mysteries surrounding the ancient machine, forge some less than ideal, or sane, alliances and gain control of his new powers in order to stop the mad man known only as Xham. If he doesn't, Anatus will fall to Xham unless Ray's unchecked powers destroys it first.
