

In the golden age of whaling, the entire ocean is a hunting ground. An American whaling ship and her hardworking crew are bound for the South Pacific, in search of their valuable prey. Their whale-hunting mission leads them to exotic places in their quest for whale oil, spermaceti, and ambergris. But, in a freak accident, their ship catches fire, and sinks. A handful of survivors are cast adrift in the endless blue sea. They embark on a life-or-death quest to find an inhabitable island in the middle of the largest ocean on the planet. Will the natives these castaways eventually encounter turn out to be friendly, or hostile? What new kind of vast wealth will they discover in their travels? Will they prevail against their nagging hunger and raging thirst, and live to see their families again?
