

Life as a human in the 1300s was peaceful. A quiet ordinary life. Nothing exciting happening save for the yearly events here and there. The Moors would bloom every year with heather, and the sweet scent of the flowers perfume would settle in the air. I was lucky to have the parents I did. While most people cared about marrying off their children, obsessing over money and material items - my parents could not have cared any less. My father being a great chemist, often hired by the King for things like medical things, or random odd jobs here and there meant we didnt have to worry about money, and so I was able to become educated. I never really was into the whole marriage thing, getting all dressed up and promised to someone you might hate in ten years, but all of that changed one day. The day I met HIM. Antarus. Stormy blue eyes, a smile that made my knees weak, and a voice that wrapped around me with a comforting touch. He was it, the one. But he had a dark secret. As my eighteenth birthday grew closer, the only desire in my heart, was to be his forever. And so, with my birthday at hand, a wedding, and a small ritual, my entire life was changed. My mortal life ended, and my eternal one began. The only fear I had was if I was to be a monster or Eternally Human.
