

Billionaire ex-soldier and CEO, Ridge Romanos mission is to improve the lives of wounded veterans. With the big vote on his veterans bill coming up before Congress soon, how had he ended up on stage between two cover models with a hundred women shouting, "Take it off, Tucker!" That's the question his family and friends would be asking tomorrow, that and "Who's Tucker?" If he can only slip away without repercussions. Buffy Calloways face and body were recognizable worldwide but the face she's looking for is the face of her franchise. Interviewing cover models at the D.C. conference, she finds her man. Tucker - the late arrival - has the je ne sais quoi that will make her talent agency and photography studio an immediate success. The Calloways have always known what they wanted and Buffy knows she's the one. There's just one problem. Ridge laughs at the notion of himself as a cover model. He has more important priorities. Who is Buffy to argue with such a noble cause, but she's determined to show Ridge he's underestimated the influence of a vast romance community. Could this be the first time a Calloway was wrong? "I loved Luc from the first page!" Livia Quinn's contemporaries remind me of Jill Shalvis and Robyn Carr, stories with heart and heat. Hard Days Knight
