

Kids are under the influence of the Internet. It's their place. They live on it-leaving their parents scrambling for answers about what to do with My Space.com, pornographic websites, instant messaging, blogs ... and how to shield their children from online sexual predators. Best-selling author of Every Man's Battle, Stephen Arterburn, and Roger Marsh, who co-hosts the nationally syndicated Homeward radio program, have teamed up to equip parents with easy lessons on how to monitor their kids activity online, plus the practical answers they need to teach kids the realities of the Internet. There isn't a parent in America who doesn't need this book, and I can't think of two more qualified people to help parents teach their children to be web wise kids. From the foreword by Jim Burns, PhD., President, Homeward.
