

Voodoo. Murder. Betrayal. Wedding? One of these things is just not like the others. In two months, Estela will be married to the love of her life. She doesn't have a dress, a venue, or invitations, but she's positive things will work themselves out. Between planning her wedding and managing Moo's career, she finds it hard to focus, and the knowledge that she's killed someone "violently" is pretty distracting. She's promised Caleb not to get involved in another murder investigation, but what if she's the murderer? Certainly she should get involved then? At least to turn herself in? But then things get crazy and supermodels are being offered left and right. With Moo a little over seven months pregnant, she could already be next on the killer's list! Estela knows she has to intervene somehow. Protect Moo. Marry Caleb. She can do these two things at once, can't she? Determined, Estela hurries to conclude this murder business. Just as things start to get back to normal, she sees a side of Caleb that she never expected in a million years. It is a side that makes her question everything. Does she even know him? Does she know herself? Maybe there won't be a wedding after all. [Revised June 2015]
