Shermaine Brown is one of the top African American female surgeons in all of Texas. Although she has achieved massive success, making it in a male dominated profession has made her a very tough no nonsense type of girl, who has no time for love. Through sheer chance she meets a laid back, sweet and charming cowboy named Nathan. They couldnt be more different, but theres a spark between them that neither of them can deny. Nathan tries to get to know Shermaine better but even with the encouragement of her best friend, Shermaine is having nothing of it and encourages him to be on his way. Over the next several days, Shermaine keeps seeing Nathan at her hospital and he is nothing but the sweetest gentlemen. While on the inside she wants to be with him, her tough exterior keeps pushing him away. But the cowboy persists no matter how rude Shermaine is and ups his ante every time on the romantic gestures. Eventually even Shermaines walls break down, and she realizes that being loved, and loving someone is just what she needed in her cold sterile surgeons life. Everything is going great until a tragic accident at work causes Shermaine to re-evaluate her situation. Will their love be able to overcome all odds and bring them back together? Will the cowboy keep persisting no matter how many roadblocks Shermaine puts in front of him?
