

Born into a family that values music, Natasha Bedingfield's solo career began in the shadow of her older brother, Daniel. But when her single Unwritten climbed to the top of the American pop music charts, Natasha's music suddenly seemed to be everywhere. Unwritten was even used by Barack Obama as part of his presidential campaign. Now that she is a singer songwriter in her own right, Natasha uses her fame to call attention to conditions in the world that need attending to, especially those involving children. She is as passionate about the causes she supports as she is about her music. Whether on stage or off, Natasha Bedingfield is connecting with her fans and making a difference in their lives.
