

This collection of articles is culled from the columns he wrote for the weekly Jewish Press from 1961 to 1990. Rabbi Kahane fought fervently and fearlessly for a broad range of Jewish causes. One of his most important weapons was his pen. His articles were impassioned yet logically reasoned expositions, applying the Torah approach to current situations and issues. They show his unique ability to translate Torah values into a viable, practical approach to the urgent problems facing the Jewish people in our time.
