

A gripping first-hand account of a hacker crew hunting a paedophile ring under the noses of London's Metropolitan Police. As we hacked and sniffed and snooped our way across an South London, the Met chalked up the results and omitted to check if any Computer Misuse laws had been broken. It was an incestuous and self-serving love-child, the illegitimate offspring of we hackers and of the forces put in place to stop us. This is the story of what we did, and how we did it. It will blow your mind as you realise just how many footprints you leave behind whilst you - so you believe - anonymously move around the Internet.
