

This is the first short book in a series discussing lots of aspects of sex and relationships. The author is a father and was a college lecturer in biology for many years. The book is written for his son and aims to give a broad, yet balanced perspective on different aspects of relationships and sex. He hopes to promote a more loving and respectful perspective on sex than that often promoted by mainstream media or the functional biology texts. This book is aimed at a secular audience and includes content regarding masturbation. The author encourages parents to pre-read the book to ensure they are comfortable with its contents before making it available. However he feels positive sex education is more important today, in our internet society, than possibly ever before.
