

Fiction. Jack Hodgins first book, published originally in 1976, is once again in print in a new edition. Winner of the Eatons Book Prize and nominated for the Governor Generals Award, SPIT DELANEYS ISLAND, a collection of short stories, put Vancouver Island on the map as a Canadian literary locale and set Hodgins off on his literary career. Often compared to Faulkners fiction of the deep South, Hodgins stories develop through people who seem to live at the edge of the world, always in danger of falling off that edge. There is Spit himself, the keeper of a steam locomotive that has been exiled to Ottawa for display; there are loggers, country wives, bookstore owners, and people who live up the mountain in isolated communes.

Jack Hodgins' fiction has won the Governor General's Award, the Canada- Australia Prize, the Commonwealth Prize (Canada and the Caribbean) and the Ethel.
