

A short story from the author of Of Moths and Butterflies and Cry of the Peacock. Myra Thorpe is not mad, and in order to escape being confined to an asylum, she runs away. Finding shelter with an old woman and her grown son in an out of the way village, she finds herself with the unique opportunity of examining her history. What happened to her mother? What will become of herself? And what is she to make of the strange visions she sees through the spectacles she finds in an ancient graveyard? Summers End is part of the Sixteen Seasons collection, and can be purchased in one volume at a discounted price.
