

Historically, deficits in social skills have been a hallmark for children with learning, developmental and emotional disorders. Over the past two decades, the erosion of social skills among children who had not been previously been thought of as "at risk" has resulted in troubling breakdowns in social structure. These changes are evident in the establishment of School Resource Officers, lockdowns and shootings. Skill deficits are arguably the greatest threat to long-term family and social integrity that the world now faces. The Happy House Game can help you address these problems
