

Two children and their babysitter spend a day at the beach. Not everyone gets back home alive. A short cautionary tale of Literary Bizarro Horror told by a Black Cat, and inspired by works of Edgar Allan Poe. The short story is 5,372 words long or about 20 pages. This fictional work of Literary Horror contains strong language not suitable for young readers. Due to its opinionated but mildly foul mouthed narrator this story is rated somewhere above PG13 for heavy use of the S-word but somewhere below R, for a lack of any use of the F-word. It would probably rate around T16 if such a rating existed. This story contains no sex or references to sex.
