

Burma in the spring of 1891, and thereafter for three years I remained in Rangoon. I often think how slight a knowledge of Burma I should have carried away, had I left at the end of this period. Happily it came to me to travel during the next two years throughout the length and breadth of the land, and Burma in its true character was disclosed before my eyes. The idea of recording my impressions was constantly present in my mind at this time; but I did not write much. It seemed to me that the country was a big country, and that I might well spend a year or two in preparation. But I was too liberal to myself. Domestic and personal troubles sent me home unexpectedly in the spring of 1896, and two years later, when I returned to the East, it was to find myself swept into quite another and very engrossing current of work in Northern India. But my thoughts were still often with Burma, and as I went to and fro amidst the splendid monuments of the Mogul Emperors; as I .(Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and dont occur in the book.)About the Publisher Forgotten Books is a publisher of historical writings, such as: Philosophy, Classics, Science, Religion, History, Folklore and Mythology.Forgotten Books Classic Reprint Series utilizes the latest technology to regenerate facsimiles of historically important writings.
