

This is the second volume in the Vedic Hymns section of the Sacred Books of the East. It was the final SBE text volume to be converted to etext. While continuing the thread of Vedic linguistics which Max Muller started in the first Vedic Hymns volume of the SBE, Oldenberg does not attempt to rise to the same level of analysis of the religious content of these Rig-veda hymns. In fact, at several points he states that he really has no idea what some passages in these hymns mean, simply attempting the best possible translation. For instance, there are repeated references to the Two Mothers of Agni, which appears to refer to a pre-Vedic twin mother goddess. However Oldenberg makes no attempt to explain this beyond identifying the two as Dawn and Night. About Author: Hermann Oldenberg (October 31, 1854 - March 18, 1920) was a German scholar of Indology, and Professor at Kiel (1898) and Gottingen (1908).
