In comparing these statistics with those of the department of the Seine, it will be seen that the average mortality from Hydrophobia has been reduced from i00per i,000to7-5per 1,000. These figures apply only to those bitten by mad dogs. As regards the 48 persons bitten by mad wolves before the 22nd of April, there were 4 deaths; but a calculation based upon eight documents communicated to M. Pasteur indicates a mortality of 82 per 100 after the bites of mad wolves. A paper published by Professor Brouardel in the Dictionnaire Encyclopfidique des Sciences M6dicales on Rabies gives a mortality proportion of 67 per 100. Thus it may be seen that the difference between the two results is considerable. To give further proof of the value of the anti-rabic inoculations, M. Grancher compared the efficacy of the three different kinds of inoculations that are now generally practised--namely, that of Jenner, that for Charbon, and that for Hydrophobia. Before the Jennerian vaccination, the non-vaccinated died from Small-pox in the proportion of 500 per 1,000, those imperfectly vaccinated succumbed in the proportion of 260 per 1,000, and those properly vaccinated in the proportion of 23 per 1,000. The preservative action of the Jennerian vaccine is therefore represented by the absolute value of 500: 23--that is to say, 2170. Besides, veterinarians numbering more than 200 who employ the charbonous vaccine give the following statistics:--Mortality before vaccination, 120 per 1,000; mortality after, 5 per 1,000 on an average. The preservative action of the charbonous vaccine is therefore represented by the absolute value of 120: 5--that is to say, 24. Finally, the statistics furnished by M. Leblanc to the Council of Hygiene, compared with tho...
