

Hannah has had a hard life. She lived in an orphanage as a child. She traveled on an orphan train with a group of other children and was placed in a doctor's home. She lived with him until his death when she was 19 and she suddenly didn't have a home, again. She became a mail-order bride to what turned out to be an abusive man. A few years later, she was a widow and pregnant. She didn't know what to do. Should she try to be a mail-order bride one more time? Chase was a blacksmith who lived in Pine Valley, Montana. He was almost 30 years old and he hadn't been able to find a woman who wanted to marry him. All of his younger brothers and his sister had found someone to love. Why not him? Find out what happens when Hannah and Chase are brought together by an ad placed in a newspaper. Will they be able to learn to love each other and form a family of their own?
