A fisherman was arrested for the crime, but he died in prison before he could be brought to trial, swearing his innocence with his last breath. And if he didn't kill Henrietta Stern, who did? When a surprising bequest makes Emmalynn the owner of Henrietta's dilapidated Brighton estate, she decides it's time to learn the truth about that tragic night. She finds herself caught between three men: Boyd Devlon, the house's charming caretaker; Gordon Stuart, Henrietta's rakish brother; and George Reed, who won't rest until he clears his father's name. But only two people know who murdered Henrietta—Emmalynn and a killer who will strike again when Emmalynn remembers.
