

There's a line familiar to most MBA graduates: The hardest part of business school is getting in. And it's true. It's extremely competitive at the top programs with thousands upon thousands of applicants vying for a few hundred slots. Getting in means having an application that stands out. So why is it that so many applicants fail to take advantage of the one place they get to really distinguish themselves? A compelling essay can be the difference between admission and rejection. Don't make the mistake so many others do. Write a better essay, get in to a better program. It's that simple. Kerry Thompkins has guided scores of candidates through the application process and reviewed hundreds of essays in the process. All of the knowledge picked up along the way is condensed here in Win The Essay to help give you the edge you need to get into the MBA program of your choice. Win the Essay will walk you through the most common mistakes the majority of MBA applicants make and show you how to avoid them. Moreover, the text is highlighted with examples so you can see exactly what the common mistakes look like, helping you to avoid sounding like everyone else. If spending hundreds of dollars on a GMAT prep course is a good investment, then why not spend a tiny fraction of that and get an advantage where it really matters?
